1. When he finished his 10-year prison term for bank robbery, William Green was determined to turn his life around. At the JVS Technology Access Center, he explored career options, learned to write a resume and cover letter, and practiced how to answer difficult interview questions about his past. In his new job as a prep cook for a catering company, William has become a model employee! "JVS accepted me. They were warm and friendly and took the time to help," he said. (Source: jvs.org)

2. Erica, a community elder, said this: "I moved to this (inner-city) neighborhood last year in November. I noticed the community garden in the park and thought it looked very beautiful - most of all because it was for the community. Since then I started eating healthy, meaning eating plenty of vegetables. ANV (the organization that built and runs the garden) has helped me a lot. My health is so much better now. I no longer take diabetes medication, my blood pressure is so good, my doctor is shocked. I wish everyone would take advantage of the wonderful garden in our community." (Source: anvfarm.org)
